Birds: Are descendants of peafowl from 1950s spent another year hauling around hundreds of pounds of bird feed before decided the two jobs were simply too much.

"I've just gotten too busy," he said. "The problem was I would be going to work one day and I would go. 'Oh God, I forgot to feed the birds.'"

On any given day, a visitor could easily hear the noise produced by the flock of about 50 peacocks and peahens, and 50 resident wild turkeys.

Descendants of a single pair of peafowl owned by Dunnell in the 1950s, the birds have long been synonymous with the property. They are bound to be in the future as well -- the Dunnell family donated the land with the stipulation that the property be developed as a park.

"The intent was to take the larger of the two homes and convert it into a neighborhood center and put an aviary on the property for the peafowl," Beiner said.

By 2004, the city had a plan for the work and drafted a report that stated the estimated $2 million budget was "currently available." But by the time an architect was brought on board, construction costs had climbed and the city decided it had to scale back the project.

By the time the project was scaled back, the economy had begun to tank, and the City Council voted to spend the money elsewhere.

The project is technically still on the books, but it has no funding. If the economy starts to recover, city leaders could set aside money for it. Or they could spend the money elsewhere once again.

"All we have done is basically deferred this project," Beiner said. "It has not come off our list."

Travis: Projects include replacing reservoir

Approximately $7.4 billion in defense-related funding was included in the stimulus package, and the Department of Defense announced the list of projects on Friday. Hospitals under construction at Camp Pendleton in Southern California and Fort Hood, Texas, are the largest package.

More funding would be on the way.

"This is just one part of the spending package list," said Solano County Supervisor Mike Reagan, a retired Air Force officer.

Several other agencies and local governments such as the Solano Transportation Authority and the Solano County Sheriff's Office are in the process of getting some stimulus funding.

Reagan called the amount of Travis' funding a nice amount of repair and construction money.

"It is operations maintenance money and that is what's always scarce," he said.

The City of Fairfield is also getting federal funding unrelated to the stimulus package for its Place 2 Be After Three after-school program and its transportation center.

The 2009 Omnibus Appropriations Bill signed by Obama includes $190,000 for the Place 2 Be After Three and $475,000 to begin designing the Fairfield Transportation Center's second parking structure.

Earlier this month, members of the Fairfield City Council traveled to Washington, D.C., to lobby for projects. In addition to the Place 2 Be After Three, the list of projects included air conditioning for the Matt Garcia Youth Center, creation of an emergency operations center and closed-circuit TVs on North Texas Street.

Shooter: AG wants to check parolee's records but was never charged, according to state prison officials.

"Mixon was certainly a character that needed more supervision," said Brown, the former mayor of Oakland. "In Oakland, the highway patrol has an office there, sheriff and police. And all those agencies should have a list of the more dangerous, threatening parolees so they can keep a watch on them."

Problems involving parolees from California's overcrowded prison system have long beset state official who must monitor them, local officials who try to keep streets safe and federal authorities who enforce firearms and other laws.

Mixon was one of 164 Oakland parolees in mid-March who had outstanding arrest warrants for parole violations, state prison records show.

The city of 400,000 had more than 1,900 total parolees at the time, including nearly 300 who had been returned to custody or whose parole was about to be revoked.

Statewide, almost 17,000 of the nearly 125,000 parolees were wanted for violating their parole requirements, state records show.

Mixon's family members said he was upset that he was unable to find work, felt his parole officer was not helping him and feared he would be arrested for a parole violation.

Mixon was wanted for missing an appointment with his parole supervisor.

State prison officials said Mixon's parole officer was responsible for 70 parolees.

A caseload of that size is nearly unmanageable, and also not unusual, said Lance Corcoran, spokesman for California's prison guard union, which includes parole officers.

Too many parolees prevent officers from effectively monitoring or guiding them back into society, Corcoran said.

"There is no control," he said. "It's simply supervision, and supervision at distance."

Mixon was driving a 1995 Buick when motorcycle patrolmen Sgt. Mark Dunakin, 40, and Officer John Hege, 41, stopped him around 1 p.m. Saturday, police said. Dunakin was shot dead at the scene. Hege was declared brain-dead over the weekend but remained on life support Monday.

Assets: Hope to get banks lending again

It was a huge gambit and one that came like a tonic to Wall Street, which had panned an earlier outline of the program that lacked detail.

The introduction of the plan was closely choreographed so that the president -- rather than Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner -- would be the first administration official to appear on camera at midday to discuss it.

Geithner met earlier in the day, before markets opened, with a group of reporters at the Treasury Department to go over specifics. But cameras and broadcast-quality audio recorders were barred.

It was the reverse of what happened Feb. 10. Then, after Obama had helped raise expectations toward Geithner and the plan, the treasury secretary went before cameras and bombed. The Dow plunged about 300 points amid investor confusion about details.

The fleshed-out plan is designed to help fix a value on damaged mortgage loans and other toxic securities.

If the value of the securities goes up, the private investors and taxpayers would share in the gains. If the values go down, the government and private investors would incur losses.

"This will help banks clean up their balance sheets and make it easier for them to raise capital," Geithner said.

The plan will take $75 billion to $100 billion from the government's existing $700 billion Troubled Asset Relief Program. The government will pair this with private investments and loans from the FDIC and the Fed to generate $500 billion in purchasing power.

Geithner said purchases eventually could grow to $1 trillion -- roughly half of the estimated $2 trillion of toxic assets on bank books now.

On the hot seat, Geithner has a lot personally tied to the success of the new program. His performance in the Cabinet, including his slowness in learning about multimillion dollar executive bonuses paid by insurance giant AIG after taking bailout money, has been severely criticized by some in Congress.

Geithner testifies today before the House Financial Services Committee.

Under a typical transaction, for every $100 in soured mortgages being purchased from banks, the private sector would put up $7 and that would be matched by $7 from the government.

The remaining $86 would be covered by a government loan.

Crash: Crashed into cemetery in Montana shifted to ice on the wings Monday after it became less likely that overloading was to blame. The plane was designed to carry just 10 people but seven of those on board were children under 10.

Feldkamp spoke after visiting the snowy crash scene with his wife, their two surviving children and other family members. For about 45 minutes, they stood near the twisted and charred debris, talking with investigators as a light snow fell.

Also on the scene was Bob Ching, who was to have hosted the Feldkamps this week at his house at the Yellowstone Club. Ching's son, his son's wife and their two children also were killed in the crash.

Feldkamp, a dentist and president of Glen Helen Raceway in Southern California, had planned for a weeklong vacation with his extended family at the club, a millionaires-only resort south of Bozeman, Mont.

The victims included Feldkamp's daughters, Amy Jacobson, 34, of St. Helena, and Vanessa Pullen, 37, of Galt; Jacobson's husband, Erin, 36, and their children Taylor, 4, Ava, 3, and Jude, almost 2, also died in the crash, as did Pullen's husband, Michael, 39, and their children Sydney, 9, and Christopher, 7.

Brent Ching, 37, of Durham, was killed along with his wife, Kristen, 31, and their children, Hailey, 5 and Caleb, almost 4.

The pilot was identified as Buddy Summerfield, 65, of Redlands. Summerfield was a former military flier who had logged 2,000 hours flying the type of plane that crashed.
